SIXTY YEARS IN THE NATION'S HEART

SPECIAL DIAMOND JUBILEE PORTRAIT OF QUEEN ALEXANDRA.

The Daily Mirror is privileged to-day to publish this special Diamond Jubilee portrait of Queen Alexandra taken during the week-end by Messrs. W. and D. Downey, the Court photographers, expressly for the anniversary to-day of the landing of Queen Alexandra on British soil to become Princess of Wales sixty years ago.

DIAMOND JUBILEE OF QUEEN ALEXANDRA'S LANDING IN ENGLAND

Message to People To Be Broadcast by Radio.

SOUVENIR NUMBER.

"Daily Mirror" Pictures of Historic Interest.

To-day is the sixtieth anniversary of the landing on British soil of the radiant Princess Alexandra of Denmark, who was to become the bride of Edward Prince of Wales, and later Britain's beloved Queen Alexandra.

From the first this Sea King's daughter won the hearts of the British people, and she has ever since remained firmly established in their affections.

There will be no formal celebration of the event, and her Majesty will spend the day quietly at Marlborough House. She has given a message to be broadcast to the British people.

In commemoration of this important anniversary, The Daily Mirror publishes to-day a special Queen Alexandra Diamond Jubilee Number, containing pictures of historic interest.

"THAT WONDERFUL DAY."

Lord Mayor Says London Has Never Forgotten Arrival of Princess.

The Daily Mirror last night received the following tributes to Queen Alexandra's wonderful influence on the life of the nation:—

Lord Mayor of London (Alderman E. C. Moore):—

The City of London has never forgotten that wonderful day, sixty years ago, when Princess Alexandra of Denmark first landed in this country, and is deeply grateful that her Majesty is celebrating the interesting anniversary in good health and amid the affectionate regard of the whole Empire.

Lord Mayor of Birmingham (Alderman David Davis):—

Let us thank God for our Queen Alexandra's influence and let all try to be of like use as citizens, each in his or her calling.

Lord Mayor of Liverpool (Mr. Frank C. Wilson):—

I join with countless admirers in congratulating Queen Alexandra. No one is more loved than her Majesty, and we desire for her many more years of happy life. The most worthy celebration of the Diamond Jubilee would be a bumper collection on Alexandra Day as an assurance of never-ceasing affectionate loyalty to her Majesty and of our revered memory of King Edward.

Messages of congratulation to Queen Alexandra herself have already begun to pour in.

WOMANLY SYMPATHY.

Queen Alexandra's Touching Act at Unveiling of Memorial Tablet.

Queen Alexandra, the Princess Royal and Princess Maud were present yesterday at the unveiling by the Bishop of London in the Chapel Royal, St. James' Palace, of a mural tablet to the memory of Dr. Edgar Sheppard, late Sub-Dean and Domestic Chaplain to the Court.

At the close there was a touching incident. Queen Alexandra was being conducted from the chapel, but noticing Mrs. Sheppard, she left the procession, went over to the widow's pew, grasped her by the hand and said a few words of womanly sympathy and cheer.

TWO MEN OF KENT.

Members of Guard of Honour at Landing of Princess.

At least two members of the old Kent Volunteer Regiment, who formed the guard of honour when Princess Alexandra first landed at Gravesend, sixty years ago, are still living in Kent.

Mr. Tappenden.

Mr. Chapman.

They are Mr. George Tappenden, who, as a man of twenty-eight, was a Volunteer veteran at the time, and Mr. John Chapman, then a boy of sixteen, and the youngest "man" on parade.

Both are, of course, immensely interested in the Diamond Jubilee of Queen Alexandra.

FIRST NIGHT RULE.

Late Comers Excluded from Theatre Till Curtain Fell.

"THE GREAT BROXOPP."

By Our Dramatic Critic.

The tickets issued for the first night comedy last night of Mr. A. A. Milne's four-act comedy, "The Great Broxopp," bore the following notice, printed in red:—

FIRST NIGHT RULE.

Late comers will not be admitted until the curtain has fallen after the first act.

Earnest playgoers would have found it easier to obey this injunction had the management stated on the ticket what time the performance started. As a matter of fact, it was supposed to start at 8.30, but at that time people were still arriving. The curtain actually rose at 8.54.

Two women and one man (a well-known actor) were excluded from the stalls during the first act, which lasted only sixteen minutes.

Great interest is taken in the development of Mr. Milne as a dramatist. In this new play he Next Monday the first selection of entrants in "The Daily Mirror" £2,500 Beauty Competition will be published, and as the day draws nearer the rush of photographs increases in volume.

shows us, in Broxopp (played by Edmund Gwenn in plus fours) a man who is a genius at publicity and makes a fortune by inventing the phrase, "Broxopp's Beans for Babies."

His troubles begin when his son—Eton and Oxford—wants to marry, and is ashamed of the fierce light which beats on the name of Broxopp. The great Broxopp is greater than ever. He gets rid of the business and changes his name. Then comes ruin, and he has to start all over again.

The comedy is amusing in places, but slow in action, and shows no advance on Mr. Milne's previous work. A friendly audience received it with moderate enthusiasm.

The acting is good, especially that of Miss Mary Jerrold as Mrs. Broxopp. Minor parts are well done by Mr. Dawson Milward, Miss Faith Celli and Mr. Ian Hunter.

STRANGE MARRIAGE.

Couple Accept Each Other in Solicitor's
Office—Valid in Scotland.

A curious case of a couple who accepted each other as husband and wife in a solicitor's office was declared a valid marriage by Lord Ashmore in the Court of Session, Edinburgh, yesterday.

An Italian, Carlo Tallarico, met an English woman in London, and they agreed to marry in 1918. They resided twenty days in Scotland, and ultimately accepted each other in the manner described in the presence of the solicitor and his clerk, and a declaration was signed.

His lordship, remarking that the case was unprecedented, said such a course would be incompetent in England, but it was valid according to the principles of the Scottish courts.

CAVE DEATH SECRET.

No Clue to Identity of Woman Who Met Lonely Fate in Essex.

There will be an inquest to-day on the elderly woman who was found dead in a cave near Ongar under mysterious circumstances. The police are still absolutely in the dark as to her identity. She is unknown in the neighbourhood.

About sixty years of age, she had worn a fur-trimmed coat.

The woman had apparently wandered some distance through muddy ground before falling exhausted. There were no signs of violence.

RIVER RESCUE.

Policemen Save Sixteen-Year-Old Girl in Strong Current.

Two police officers effected a thrilling rescue of a sixteen-year-old girl from the river at Mays Green, South Wales.

The girl after being scolded by her parents ran from the house and in the presence of the officers jumped into the river.

There was a strong current running, but the girl was rescued after being carried a quarter of a mile down stream.

£1,000 MAN GETS DOLE.

Bank Draft and £6 Found on Ex-
Soldier Fined for Assault.

When William Barry, twenty-five, described as a labourer, was fined £5 at Brighton yesterday for being drunk and disorderly and assaulting the police, the chief constable stated that the man had served in the Irish Guards and Dublin Fusiliers, and was now drawing the dole.

He had six pounds in his possession when arrested, as well as a draft on a Dublin bank for £1,000.

ECTOPLASM GHOSTS.

Amazing Pictures Shown by Sir A. Conan Doyle.

"SPOOK" AS NURSE.

Photographs of solid "ghosts" were shown on a screen by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle at the Hotel Metropole yesterday.

The "ghosts," he explained, were composed of a substance called ectoplasm, a putty-like material which emerges from the nostrils in mediums when under control and is capable of lifting tables and forming itself into likenesses of the dead.

Sir Arthur began by showing photographs of the scientists who supported his theories, and of mediums almost entirely enveloped in ectoplasm.

One, who appeared to be particularly rich in the substance, was portrayed in a recumbent position, with ectoplasm flowing from his chin to his knees like a preposterous beard.

Then Sir Arthur exhibited a photograph of an ectoplasmic female ghost of the Elizabethan era and described how this ghost infested itself upon a household, conversed freely with the family and insisted on nursing the children.

The next slide showed the ghost and her host standing with linked arms and snug smiles like a family album portrait.

Sir Arthur wound up his amazing lecture by explaining that ectoplasm is a substance which has been analysed and found to contain most of the properties of the human body.

Everybody excludes ectoplasm in vapour form, and although it can be seen and photographed it is so sensitive that it returns to the body of the medium soon after a light is turned on.

GAS DEATH MYSTERY.

Merchant's Strange Letter to Sister-in-Law—Inquest Adjourned.

Owing to mysterious circumstances connected with the death of Mr. Robert Francis Roberts, woollen street, Soho, who was a merchant, of Lexington square, was found gas-poisoned in his counting house, the Westminster Coroner yesterday adjourned the inquest until to-day.

When found, Mr. Roberts had a pen in his right hand, and police evidence showed that he had apparently fallen off a stool, and that it was quite easy for the tap of the ring on the gas stove to have been turned on. A tap at the back of the stove was, however, also turned on.

A letter addressed by Mr. Roberts to his sister-in-law, with whom he lived at Barnes, stated: "I have come over so queer since you left, and in case I am not here to-morrow am signing some blank cheques, and putting them in the safe."

Mr. Tonkin, solicitor for the relatives, urged that the case was not one of suicide.

PEER'S TITLE DISPUTE.

Lord Leverhulme's "No" to Request to Drop "of Western Isles."

Lord Leverhulme, in a reply to the secretary of the Gaelic Society of Inverness, definitely declines to delete the words "of the Western Isles" from his title.

Letters he has received from the people of Lewis and Harris, representing more than three-quarters of the Western Isles, indicate, says Lord Leverhulme, that it would give greater offence to these people if he deleted the words

DIVORCE REPORTS.

Should They Be Given in the Press?—
Lord Chancellor's Views.

Should divorce cases and similar cases be fully reported in newspapers?

The Lord Chancellor has replied to a deputation of M.P.s who waited upon him with reference to this subject, and suggests that they should confer with newspaper editors and proprietors and bring the matter before the House of Commons.

Sir Evelyn Cecil, introducing the deputation, pointed out that in French law judgments only and names of parties are allowed to be published. No foreign nation allowed such publications as we do. Another suggestion from some Press quarters was that a brief official report only should be published.

Mr. Bridgeman (Home Secretary) also emphasised the advantage of discussing the matter in the House of Commons.

CLERGYMAN'S TRAGIC DEATH.

The Rev. George Pelham Ackworth, fifty-seven, staying at Little Common, Bexhill-on-Sea, was found in the bathroom of his house with a throat wound. An open pen-knife lay near.

At the inquest yesterday a verdict was returned of suicide whilst of unsound mind.

POISON TESTS AT INQUEST.

Analyst Mixes Weed-killer
in Court at Newport.

SON IN BOX.

Story of Mother's Complaint of "Tampering" with Food.

Experiments with weed-killer were made in court at the resumed inquest at Newport (Mon.) yesterday on Mrs. Jenny Morgan, wife of a butcher, who, medical experts have stated, died from arsenical poisoning.

Evidence was given by a son named Willie of finding spoiled food.

Mrs. Lloyd, a friend of Mrs. Morgan, spoke of two wills she made a few days before her death on January 22.

Both these witnesses broke down and left the court sobbing. The inquest was adjourned until to-day.

TALE OF TWO WILLS.

Friend of Mrs. Morgan on Document
Written by Two Sons.

Mrs. Maud Emily Lloyd told how, on January 13, Cyril, another son, wrote down a will which the dying woman dictated.

The coroner read the will, which stated that the premises were to remain intact if her husband wished to stay there, otherwise they were to be sold and the proceeds, together with any bank balance, divided between the three children.

When the coroner remarked that the last four lines were in a different handwriting from the first part of the will, Mrs. Lloyd agreed, and said that while at her house Willie added something to the will. She thought that Willie read the will over to her, and then she signed it.

Did Mr. Morgan say anything?—Yes. He said to his wife: "Where do I come in, dear?" to which Mrs. Morgan replied: "You will be all right, Bert." Mr. Morgan said: "All right." A second will, which witness said was signed on January 19, was produced by the coroner, who said it was similar to the first.

Mr. Rudd Thompson, the county analyst, was recalled, and said the weed-killer previously referred to was a mixture of soda and soda and had a very distinct taste, something like Epsom salts, followed by a disagreeable taste of soda and a hot, burning flavour.

Would there be any traces to the eye if it were used?—None.

Mr. Thompson dissolved some weed-killer in water to prove his statement. He also mixed with some arrowroot, sufficient of the weed-

The result of our Broadcasting Programme
Competition will be found on page 19.

killer to kill ten persons. This mixture, placed alongside some pure arrowroot, showed only a very faint colour.

Mr. Dauncey (representing relatives): What quantity of weed-killer would be required to give a taste to a loaf of bread or a cup of arrowroot?—I should say three grains would do so.

Mr. Dauncey: What quantity would be fatal within twenty-four hours?—Three grains.

Dr. J. Lloyd Davies said the condition of Mrs. Morgan was consistent with the prolonged administration of arsenic.

Willie Morgan said he saw specks in his mother's food. He got into a temper and told Mrs. Carthy (Mr. Morgan's niece) that he should ask for an inquest if his mother died.

I told my mother about it, proceeded witness, and she said to my father that someone was tampering with her food.

OTHER NEWS IN BRIEF.

To-day's Weather.—Mainly fair; some showers; rather mild. Lighting-up time: 6.47 p.m.

New Bluenanite.—Mr. C. B. Armstrong has been appointed Bluenanite Pursuivant of Arms.

Doctor Shot by Patient.—Dr. Olander, of Stockholm, was shot by a former patient when entering his motor-car yesterday.

Glasgow broadcasting station, serving Scotland and the North of Ireland, was opened last night.

Plane's Forced Descent.—A British seaplane from Calshot aerodrome, which was forced to descend off Cherbourg, returned yesterday to its base, Reuter states.

L.C.C. and Women Teachers.—The L.C.C. yesterday ratified the decision that women teachers should resign on marriage, except where husbands were incapacitated or had deserted.

Car Falls on Woman.—A chauffeur seeing Mrs. Edmunds, of Greenhill-street, Stratford-on-Avon, crossing a street, applied his brakes so quickly that the car fell on her and killed her.

A Correction.—The Daily Mirror regrets that the photograph published on page 11 of yesterday's issue, purporting to be that of Lieutenant-Colonel Malcolm Henderson, who died at Sandhurst, is, in fact, a photograph other than that of the deceased officer.

Major Hills Loses Conservative Stronghold at Liverpool: Labour's 1,050 Majority.

NEW SURPRISE BLOW AT CABINET WOBBLERS

Plight of Premier with Four Offices to Fill—How Will He Avoid Further By-Election Shocks?

By the surprise defeat of Major Hills by the Labour candidate with a majority of 1,050 votes at Edge Hill (Liverpool) yesterday three Ministers have lost their seats in four days.

The result came as a bombshell to the Government, for Edge Hill has been regarded as a Conservative stronghold, and Major Hills' return was regarded as certain. But the Government vacillation on housing, the Ruhr and on Mesopotamia and foreign policy generally had sapped the foundations of that stronghold as in the case of Mitcham and East Wilsden.

Major Hills, Sir Arthur Griffith-Boscawen and Colonel Stanley are in the wilderness, and the Hon. W. Watson is still awaiting a seat to take office as Lord Advocate. What will the Premier do?

NEWS THAT CAME LIKE A BOMBHELL IN HOUSE.

MAJORITY DOWN TO 73.

The result of the Edge Hill (Liverpool) by-election was declared last night as follows:—

Mr. J. H. Hayes (Lab.) ..... 10,300
Major Hills (Con.) ..... 9,250

Majority ..... 1,050

LABOUR GAIN

Major J. W. Hills is the Financial Secretary to the Treasury, and is the third Minister to lose his seat in four days.

At the last election Sir Watson Rutherford (Conservative) had a majority of 4,666 over Mr. Hayes. The percentage of electors (19,610 men, 14,024 women) at the poll was 58 per cent.

The constituency is mainly a working-class area, and has some thousands of railwaymen voters.

The defeat of Major Hills came almost like a bombshell in the Commons, the excitement in the lobby being astounding. One M.P. said that he could hardly believe his eyes.

"In the House itself cries of 'Resign' were raised, and in the lobby there was much Labour cheering."

Mr. Henderson said, "The Edge Hill result means a tremendous break in the old traditions of one of the most Tory strongholds in the whole country."

Mr. James O'Grady said, "It is an astonishing result for Liverpool."

There were predictions among the Opposition that a General Election may be expected within a year.

WHAT WILL PREMIER DO?

No New Ministers Where Re-Election Is Necessary.

By Our Lobby Correspondent.

The sensational defeat of Major J. W. Hills, the Financial Secretary to the Treasury, was regarded in the Lobby last night as the most important reverse the Government has received. In many respects it is more striking than the defeat of Sir A. Griffith-Boscawen at Mitcham or of Colonel Stanley at East Wilsden. It must be remembered that Sir Watson Rutherford's seat remained Conservative even in 1906, when Conservative seats went down like ninepins all over the country.

The loss of this seat is regarded as a further blow at the Government's wobbling policy over the questions of rents, the Ruhr and Mesopotamia. Housing and the plight of ex-Servicemen have been the main issues before the electors.

The Government's majority is now down to seventy-three.

It is believed that the defeat of three Ministers at by-elections within a week is without precedent in modern history.

A London Conservative member declared that there must be no general rent decontrol and no class distinction.

"To proceed with the Premier's scheme will," he declared, "inevitably lead to the defeat of the Government." That indeed was the almost unanimous opinion in the Lobby.

It is expected that Major Hills will resign forthwith.

It is not, of course, necessary for under-secretaries who are already M.P.s to seek re-election. Therefore there will be no difficulties in filling the vacant under-secretaryships by selection of men from the rank and file of the House.

HEALTH MINISTER DEPARTS.

By Our Political Correspondent.

Sir Arthur Griffith-Boscawen, the Health Minister, called at No. 10, Downing-street yesterday and tendered his resignation to the Premier, who "regretfully accepted it." Mr. Neville Chamberlain, as indicated in yesterday's Daily Mirror, is still favourite for the vacant post.

Mr. Bonar Law is to meet London Unionist M.P.s this afternoon, when they will explain to him their strong objections to the Government rent decontrol policy, and press him to postpone the removal of all restrictions till 1925.

The Premier's attention will be drawn to the disastrous effects of his policy at East Wilsden and Mitcham, and he will be warned that it may lead to the defeat of the Government.

The Ministers were still declaring last night that the scheme will be adhered to.

L.C.C. Demand.—After a long debate the London County Council decided last night to urge that the Rent Act should not be withdrawn this year and that decontrol should be applied to all types of houses at the same time.

Mr. David Kirkwood, the Labour leader, yesterday received 3,000 postcards from Clydebank alone, protesting against the Rent Restriction (Notice of Increase) Bill, while several other Scottish members were also the recipients of postcards from the same area totalling between 4,000 and 5,000.

An important majority authorised the Government to continue negotiations to arrive at peace on the following conditions:

The Mosul question must be settled within a provisional period; the financial, economic and administrative questions must be settled in accordance with the complete independence of the nation; the occupied territories must be evacuated rapidly after the signature of peace.—Reuter.

A large number of girls and firemen had narrow escapes from an exploding ammunition factory, when a fire broke out at a munition factory at Park Royal, near Acton.

The fire occurred at the old No. 3 filling factory, where the girls were at work taking bullets out of cartridges, and was caused by an electric short circuit. A small quantity of cordite was ignited, and the building, a wooden and iron shed, was soon alight.

Almost immediately the ammunition stored on the premises which had not been treated began to explode.

The girls were hurried out of the building and many lost their overcoats and money.

The shed, having ten exits, is within an area separated from the road by a barbed wire fence. Many of the girls were panic-stricken and forced their way through the barbed wire, cutting their faces and hands and tearing their clothes.

The fire was extinguished in an hour.

Mr. Baldwin said trade was beginning slowly to climb out of the abyss. Whereas the year before last our export trade only amounted to 50 per cent. of the pre-war trade, last year it had crept up to 69 per cent., and the last quarter of the year showed 75 per cent.

The arrest of an insurance agent charged with larceny involving over 30,000 dollars (£5,000) has brought to light an alleged new plan to overthrow the Soviet Government.

According to the testimony of a man said to have been employed by the accused, thirty-seven prominent American manufacturers had contributed 1,000,000 dollars ($200,000) each to finance a corporation for trading with Russia after the Soviet had been overthrown.

It was stated by the City Prosecutor that the accused man told manufacturers that a group of Russians formerly associated with the Czar's Government had joined with "a number of Japanese diplomats" and planned to organise a "United States of Russia."—Reuter.

"No Policy" Defended—Cuno Hints at Mediation.

Conflicting messages were received last night regarding the situation in the Cologne area.

It was officially announced in Paris last night, the Exchange reported, that an agreement has been reached between General Godley, the British Rhine Commander, and General Payot concerning French traffic over the railways in the British zone.

On the other hand Reuter's Cologne correspondent states "on the highest authority" that no agreement has been reached and that there is a complete deadlock.

According to this report, "General Godley refused to accede to the French demands, and General Payot announced that if the British authorities on the spot did not give way he would take the matter to London."

"General Godley and Colonel Manton, the head of the Inter-Allied Railway Sub-Committee were summoned to London."

It is contended that the French plans would cause considerable, if not complete dislocation of traffic at Cologne, and that, as a strike of the German staff would be inevitable, the lines in the British zone would be worked by French railwaymen. The British position would therefore be rendered untenable.

MORE TOWNS OCCUPIED.

From Berlin it is reported that Wipperfuerth was occupied yesterday by French cavalry, which proceeded with other detachments in the direction of Gummersbach.

No confirmation has been received in Berlin of the report published in London that the French had occupied the towns of Remscheid and Kronenberg. The report was, however, published by several papers in Berlin.—Reuter.

Herr Cuno, Imperial Chancellor, recited to the Reichstag yesterday a detailed history of the "acts of injustice" in the Ruhr.

He launched a fervent appeal to the world to consider Germany's position. The Chancellor accused the French Premier of being afraid of telling his countrymen the truth about the Ruhr campaign.

Germany, he declared, was resolved to hold to the end. She was not going to undertake impossibilities or to capitulate, but if the way were opened she was prepared to negotiate.—Central News.

German Ambassador Dead.—Dr. Mayer, the German Ambassador to France, died yesterday in Munich, following an operation.

NEW "IF" ABOUT WAR.

Premier and Labour Proposals—"No Policy" Better.

"If the line advocated in many of the Labour speeches were adopted, instead of maintaining the Entente we should have to be prepared for enforcing our will upon France by war."

Thus spoke the Premier in the Commons last night, replying to a Labour motion moved by Mr. Ramsay MacDonald.

He requested the Chambers of France and Belgium to appoint representative committees to exchange information and views with a similar committee of British M.P.s.

Other points from Mr. Bonar Law's speech were:

It was true that France by her action in the Ruhr had sustained a heavy and continuous loss, and he did not venture to prophesy what the end of it would be.

But the loss was not all on one side. The jugular vein of German industry had been cut. At this moment the Government had nothing to propose to the House. It might be that no policy was a bad policy, but a policy which could not succeed and which, in itself, was bad, would be worse.

Principal points made by other speakers in the debate were:—

Ramsay MacDonald.—The military balance of Europe, as well as the political balance, was changing, and for the moment Britain was out of it.

Lord Robert Cecil.—We should aim at securing by means of a conference the temporary international working of the Ruhr.

Mr. Clarry.—The motion was a piece of window-dressing. Right from the beginning we should have stood beside France.

Colonel Archer Shee.—The majority of our men who fought in the war were in favour of the French occupation of the Ruhr instead of leaving that country in the lurch as we had done. Finally, the motion was talked out.

Every Skin needs two Creams

Pond's Cold Cream for use at night and Pond's Vanishing Cream for day use

IT is a gratifying fact that, with their emancipation from many conventions, Englishwomen are yearly coming to understand more of the needs of the complexion. Side by side with their increasing love of an outdoor life they are learning how to preserve the clear, unwrinkled skin of their first youth. The secret lies in the regular use of two complexion creams.

Pond's Cold Cream should be massaged into the skin of the face and hands every night before retiring—occasionally also the neck, shoulders, and arms. The effects of this perfect cold cream are thoroughly to cleanse the pores, to supplement the natural oil of the skin and thus to keep it clear, full and firm, yet velvety to the touch. Incidentally, Pond's Cold Cream prevents or remedies roughness of the skin and chapped hands.

Pond's Vanishing Cream is an entirely different cream, for it contains no oil and disappears instantly upon application. This delicately perfumed cream is for day use and can be beneficially used as frequently as required in order to freshen up the complexion and to give the skin full protection against weather effects. Its secondary use is as a base for powder, for which it is admirable.

Use these two creams regularly, the one to cleanse the skin and keep it supple—the other to refresh and protect the complexion. Every skin needs two creams—each with its special purposes, each made on an entirely different base, for no one cream can serve such widely differing needs. Pond's Creams do not promote the growth of hair.

Daffodil Time

When daffodils, more daring than the swallow, come to "take the winds of March with beauty," the daughters of Eve delight to prink themselves in new frocks and furbelows. Then comes the question of new shoes. To grace the garb of Spring it is essential to have shoes that match both the costume and the personality.

Lotus and Delta offer, in the "New Season's Styles," a wealth of choice. The charm of these shoes consists not only in their shapeliness of outline, but also in the superb leather and evidences of conscientious care in every stitch. Lotus, like daffodils, are associated with delight—the delight which all women feel in things of beauty.

A LIFE OF SERVICE.

OUR special issue to-day celebrates the sixtieth anniversary of Queen Alexandra's landing in England.

It is a pictorial record that will be valued, we hope, as a reminder of the quiet work done, the sorrows endured and the joys that have marked a very wonderful life.

When the young Princess came from Denmark in 1863, the "safe" Victorian age was at the height of its progressive activities.

It was the period of Lord Palmerston's second Ministry, of the American Civil War, and of the consequent Lancashire cotton famine. An age that seems now to belong almost to another civilisation—an age before motors, and telephones, aeroplanes and wireless!

At once, on her arrival, the Princess of Wales quietly took up her duties by the side of her husband, and she laboured with him to fill a place gradually left vacant by the Queen, whose instinct prompted her to seclusion after the death of the Prince Consort, two years earlier.

The young Princess set a standard of refinement that greatly influenced manners and fashions. Nearly forty years of this useful work were to pass before Queen Alexandra took her place upon the throne.

In 1910, after King Edward's death, came yet another phase of her career. Another new age seemed to be opening—destined to meet a great catastrophe. Always, throughout the many changes she has seen, Queen Alexandra has remained the same gracious lady to whom thousands owe so much personal kindness as well as a pattern of gentle womanhood. There is no other representative woman to-day, indeed, who can form for us so pleasant a link between the old times and the new.

What she has done she has done unobtrusively. She has wisely stood apart from the political turmoil of rapidly-changing times.

But, as she at once won the love of our people, so she has kept it through all vicissitude.

They have tried to show their sympathy for her on many occasions—in her bereavements, as mother and wife, as in her joys. They will feel it and show it again in this year of her Diamond Jubilee amongst us.

FIRST-NIGHT ROWS.

THE gallery and the actor-manager do not appear to be on very cordial terms at the moment. Or, to put it more guardedly, some members of the gallery audience on first nights are not being too polite to the actors or managers who will make speeches on these occasions.

Rowdies there are, certainly, who make it a sport to "boo" and hoot on these great festivals—irrespective, it seems, of the merits of the play. Their object would appear to be the old Jeremy-Collier grievance against all "stage plays" as plays. Their "booing" is indiscriminate.

We condemn this rough criticism. The best way to express disapproval of a play is silence. Better still is it to withdraw, as American audiences sometimes do—leaving author and actors alone with their few friends.

But we must say that the habit of bland self-congratulation, expressed in unnecessary speechmaking in English theatres, does unfortunately give an excuse to rowdies who haven't enjoyed the evening.

If you have been bored by the play it is provoking to see a manager in faultless evening dress advancing to claim your approval and announcing that he is going to tell the author how enthusiastically you have applauded his success in making you yawn!

SECRET OF QUEEN ALEXANDRA'S CHARM.

HOW SHE HAS WON THE LOVE OF THE WHOLE NATION.

By SIR SIDNEY LOW.

THIS sixty years since!

Sixty years since the "sea-king's daughter from over the sea" came to reign in the hearts of us islanders! Sixty years since the good poet who spoke for Britain rhymed his tribute to her:—

Welcome her, all things youthful and sweet,
Scatter the blossom under her feet!
Break, happy land, into earlier flowers!
Make music, O bird, in the new-budded bowers!

It was, as it happened, a singularly felicitous acclaim. Not all courtly presages are so happily justified.

Just eleven years later Tennyson was writing verses in honour of another royal bride, the Russian Princess who married the second of Queen Victoria's sons. The poet hoped then that some diviner air would "breathe through the world and change the hearts of men."

Alas! the hearts of men are no softer or purer than they were.

Turn to the land whence the "Russian flower," Marie Alexandrovna, came in March, or sought to play a prominent part, as some princesses-royal and queens-consort have done, in the political arena. Wisely has she held herself aloof from all that confused turmoil. Nobody can say which of our parties she favours, or whether she has ever favoured any party, except it be that one which includes the best-thinking and best-living members of all the others: those who are eager to help their fellow-creatures, male and female, adults and infants, human and quadruped.

What may be the Queen-mother's political philosophy—whether she is Liberal, Conservative, Socialist—one does not pause to inquire.

HER PERSONAL CHARM.

But we all know that whenever any work of mercy is to be done, be it for the sick in the hospitals, or the poor in town alleys and humble country cottages, or for disabled soldiers, or invalid children, there she is anxious to assist and encourage.

How many sufferers have been cheered and heartened by that gracious presence! How many bare infirmaries wards and whitewashed halls of affliction have been warmed and irradiated by that charming smile!

Royalty, even in this modern, democratic age, has great functions to fulfil.

It has ceased to be autocratic; it does not

QUEEN ALEXANDRA AS GUEST AT A LONDON WEDDING.

Queen Alexandra, with the King and Queen, after the wedding of Lord Louis Mountbatten.

1874. There is certainly no "diviner air" breathing over the ruin and desolation of that once great and famous Empire.

So many persons and so many things have passed into the night since that March morning sixty years ago when all London poured into the streets to give a thunderous welcome to the Viking's daughter.

The Queen-mother of those days, the royal bridegroom are gone; gone the famous statesmen and rulers—Gladstone, Disraeli, Palmerston, Bismarck, Louis Napoleon, the Tsar Alexander, the Emperor Francis Joseph—gone, too, into wreck or chaos some of their thrones and seats of power.

THE YOUNG DANISH GIRL.

Never, perhaps, in all its chequered history has this old kaleidoscope of a world been so violently shaken in so short a space.

Yet the poet was right after all. The thrones and nations swing and float and fall; but still "Love by right divine is deathless king."

The young Danish girl won her way at once to the heart of the peoples of Britain, and she has kept her place there through all the intervening three-score years of chance and change.

One seeks to probe the secret of this abiding affection, so easily gained, so quietly and steadily retained. And the answer is simple.

Queen Alexandra's effortless popularity is just the triumph of those modest qualities of good nature, kindness and sympathy, which some high-thinking souls ignore; combined, of course, with that rare personal charm which is a gift of the gods.

She is not among the "great Queens" of history.

She has never mingled in affairs of State, move armies like pieces on the chess-board, or make edicts for millions.

Its value is that it represents the permanent element of the nation, and its duty to hold up a high standard of public service, private integrity and social beneficence and good conduct, and to lead and direct many activities in which Parliaments and Ministries can do little.

To us, living in this third decade of the twentieth century, Queen Alexandra is a source of unflinching wonder and interest.

When we see her it needs an effort to remember that before the middle-aged men and women of to-day were born this lady was the brilliant head of a great aristocratic society, the glass of feminine fashion, the mould of form and taste.

What was best and most dignified in the quiet Victorian age she has carried down to our noisy, restless era.

VITAL AND ALERT.

But she does not live—she has always refused to live—on the traditions of the past; she is as vital and alert, and as keenly interested in the present, as the youngest of us.

Only a couple of days ago I read how she went to the Pony Show at the Agricultural Hall and exhibited frank and unrestrained amusement at the antics of a demonstrative Shetland.

"No girl," says the descriptive writer, "could have laughed or clapped her hands more gaily." Queen Alexandra has that delight in simple things.

She has taught us how to live to be eighty without growing old, and it is not the least of the services for which we owe her our gratitude.

THE QUEEN-MOTHER AS A WOMAN.

GLIMPSES FROM THE PRIVATE LIFE OF A GREAT LADY.

By SARAH A. TOOLEY

(Author of "The Life of Queen Alexandra").

THOSE who know Queen Alexandra best are unanimous in describing the dominant characteristic of her personality as loveliness. And even in these modern, matter-of-fact days the capacity for loving and inspiring love remains a woman's most potent charm.

The Queen-Mother realised this, when a mere girl—as the following story shows. It was told to me when I visited the scenes of the Queen's early years in Denmark.

She and her sisters and some girl friends were picnicking in the beautiful deer forest which surrounds the Château Bernstorff, a few miles from Copenhagen, where much of her girlhood was passed.

As they sat under the shade of the trees the Princesses and their friends began to look into the future, and it was agreed that each should say what she wished for most.

One wanted wealth, another a great position in the world, while another wished for beauty.

"What do you wish for, Alix?" asked her friends of Princess Alexandra, who sat silent and pensive. At length she said, "I should like most of all to be loved."

For sixty years that wish has been fulfilled with ever-growing success. Since that 7th of March, 1863, when the Sea King's daughter drove with the young Prince of Wales through the cheering crowds of London, en route for her marriage, on the 10th, at St. George's Chapel, Windsor, she has held the love of the nation.

SUNSHINE AND SHADOW.

She has moved among us as a gay, girl bride, devoted wife, fond mother and proud grandmother and great-grandmother. She has played her part nobly and tenderly through the full gamut of woman's experience, and has added to it the dignity, tact and sympathy required in a royal lady.

Sunshine and shadow have made up her life these sixty years.

She drank the cup of sorrow to the dregs in the death of her eldest son. She mourned as only a mother can over the babe, her last born, who lies in Sandringham Churchyard under the marble cross, inscribed with her chosen words, "Suffer little children to come unto Me." She mourned the husband of her youth, the loss of idolised parents, and has had her heart wrung over tragedy in the lives of a dear sister and a brother.

All these trials have been faced with womanly fortitude.

Never has she allowed private sorrow to interfere with the duties of her exalted position.

Another beautiful trait in Queen Alexandra's character is her genius for friendship. She loves to keep her old friends around her, and never forgets the one who have served her faithfully. At this time the names of the veteran General Sir Dighton Probyn, so long the Comptroller of her Household, and of the Hon. Charlotte Knollys, her devoted companion and Lady-in-Waiting, are affectionately and gratefully linked with her own by Queen Alexandra in "this diamond jubilee year."

HER FAVOURITE OCCUPATIONS.

The personal tastes of the Queen are what one, from habit, terms "womanly."

She is musical, and has been fond of drawing, painting and photography, and has worked silk embroidery as gifts to her friends. I remember a beautiful chair-cover which she worked for the late Lord Leighton.

Without being a sportswoman, Queen Alexandra has been a graceful and fearless rider, and before the advent of motors, drove her ponies a good deal at Sandringham. She has reserved relics of beautiful Vera, the saddle-horse which carried her for twenty years, and of dear old Huffy, which she used to drive in the governess cart to call on the cottagers, sometimes picking up a schoolchild or two en route.

At Marlborough House, to which she came as a bride sixty years ago, Queen Alexandra dispenses delightful hospitality and enjoys keeping in touch with many old friends, entertaining members of her family and visiting some of the institutions which have her patronage.

Rose Day is one of the most delightful occasions in her life at Marlborough House, and in this Diamond Jubilee year no more welcome token of affection can be offered Queen Alexandra than to make her Rose Day for the hospitals a record success next June.

A GENTLEMAN, age 36, enrolled on Feb. 6th, 1923, and was suffering from CONSTIPATION, INDIGESTION, NEURASTHENIA, DIZZINESS and INSOMNIA. On the 21st of the same month the following letter was received from him:—

"I should like to express my thanks to you for the benefits received up to date. I am feeling much better and stronger, and last week opened my business, which I had closed for some time. I am enclosing a detailed report. CONSTIPATION: Much better. INDIGESTION: Practically disappeared. SLEEP: Getting the 9 hours, though previous to taking up the course I had suffered with insomnia. DIZZINESS: My head is much clearer, and although the dizziness is not quite eradicated, it is very much better. GENERAL REMARKS: I FEEL MUCH STRONGER IN MYSELF AND AM MORE CONFIDENT AND HAVE AGAIN STARTED WORK. I AM CERTAINLY 100 PER CENT. BETTER MAN IN THIS SHORT TIME."

Here is another case—a lady this time—treated by Mail to New York, U.S.A.

A LADY, age 59, Nurse by profession, suffering from CONSTIPATION, THINNESS and SLUGGISH LIVER, when she enrolled. She recently writes:—

"The cause for taking your course is entirely removed, and my physical condition is much improved. Weight gained, sleeping better."

ANOTHER LADY, age 27, who enrolled on December 9, 1922, suffering from CONSTIPATION, LUNG WEAKNESS, LACK OF ENERGY and INCIPENT OBESITY, has just written:—

"I feel like another woman now. Losing fat every day, although I am eating more than I ever did before. Also a great difference in my breathing. I don't stoop at the shoulders. I have a regular bowel-action every morning, and am more than pleased with the difference your exercises have made, and feel so well now and have lost that tired feeling that I had before."

Imprisoning invisible atoms of perfume

More wonders of Icilma.

If our sight were as strong as the most powerful microscope, what a wonderful spectacle would be revealed on opening a jar of Icilma Cream!

We should see myriads of tiny particles shot from the surface of the cream as though from miniature guns, some escaping into the air, some striking the neck of the jar and recoiling. These tiny particles are the perfume atoms or 'ions,' which bear the concentrated essence of sweetness distilled from millions of blossoms.

To guard the sweet odour undiminished and prevent the escape of these wandering atoms, the Icilma green glass jar is sealed with a pure tin cap, a soft cushion of sterilised cork and a layer of special parchment.

When you open the prison door you will enjoy the full sweetness of the wonderful Icilma Bouquet, and one touch on your cheek will convince you of the stimulating, refreshing effect of the famous Natural Water contained in Icilma Cream.

TO-DAY'S GOSSIP

News and Views About Men, Women and Affairs in General

Queen Alexandra, with Princess Victoria, the daughter who has been her constant companion. Princess Victoria was born in 1893.

QUEEN OF HEARTS.

Alexandra Fashions—The King at the Play—Housing Danger.

QUEEN ALEXANDRA, whose arrival in this country sixty years ago we commemorate to-day, has had her dearest wish gratified, namely, that she should be well beloved. She is at the moment the object of the nation's deepest affection, and however far one goes back the records show a similar state of feeling to have existed. Inspired in the first instance by youth and rare beauty, this love has been maintained by grace of character.

From Over the Sea.

London was extraordinarily enthusiastic over the arrival of the Princess. On her yacht at Gravesend she appeared dressed entirely in white, with a white shawl draped round her shoulders, and a little white bonnet on her head. As she drove into London people were willing to be crushed round her carriage, and at the Mansion House there was something like a riot. All contemporary accounts agree that she was extremely beautiful.

Thackeray's Description.

Thackeray, in the "Round About Papers," wrote:—

On the day of her entrance into London, who looked more bright and happy than the Princess? On the day of the marriage the fair face bore the marks of care already, and looked out quite grave, and frightened almost, under the wreaths and lace and orange flowers. Would you have had her feel no tremor? A maiden on the bridegroom's threshold, a Princess led up to the steps of a throne? I think her pallor and doubt became her as well as her smiles.

Troubles.

Thackeray foresaw trials in store for the young Princess, and he was right. The year after her wedding she had to watch the crushing of her country, Denmark, while England stood by, a powerless neutral. In 1871 her husband nearly died, but by devoted nursing she brought him back to health.

Her Wedding Dress.

In the London Museum there may be seen the dress in which Queen Alexandra was married. It is very small. The waist, especially, is tiny. The material is rich, but the workmanship what a first-class dressmaker would to-day call clumsy. There are also shown some of the clothes of the present King when a baby; in particular there is a robe consisting mainly of a large cape of bright blue velvet with crystal buttons.

Fashions.

Queen Alexandra has set many fashions in her time. The most interesting is, perhaps, that of the Alexandra curl, the characteristic of which was, as anyone can verify by looking up old portraits, to droop coquettishly over the shoulder instead of down the back.

G.O.M. of Royal Household.

Sir Dighton Probyn, Comptroller of the Household to Queen Alexandra, is one of her closest friends. He is a great age, having just passed his ninetieth birthday, and his bent figure and flowing white beard are widely familiar. He is often seen in public in attendance on Queen Alexandra, although he now has to use a bathchair.

Mutiny Veteran.

Sir Dighton, who is a V.O. and went through the Indian Mutiny, entered the Army over seventy years ago. He was an Equerry to King Edward when the latter was Prince of Wales, and remained in the Royal Household on his late Majesty's accession. He became Comptroller to Queen Alexandra in 1910.

King Edward's Pride.

The late King Edward, though on one side of his character he was a man of pleasure, was a family man, too, and intensely fond of his children. He was also very proud of his wife's beauty. At a Marlborough House ball he once remarked: "We have asked all the prettiest women we know, but the Princess is the most beautiful of all."

The Bride at Sandringham.

When Queen Alexandra went to Sandringham as a bride sixty years ago she was prepared for the English Church service by Dean Stanley, who left on record an interesting account of how he explained to "this charming lady" in the drawing-room one Sunday morning the points of difference between the Communion service of the Anglican Church and the Danish.

Deep Religious Sentiment.

Queen Alexandra has always been a most devout worshipper, and her whole life has been instinct with religious sentiment, which has shown itself in her care for the sick and suffering. After the death of the Duke of Clarence at Sandringham, whose bedside she tended with loving devotion, her intense grief found great consolation in a funeral sermon preached by Canon Fleming on "Recognition in Eternity." This sermon was published and had a wide sale.

Last Night's Dance.

Lady Violet Brassey, who was a dance hostess last night, is an aunt of Lady Doris Gordon-Lennox, whose engagement to Mr. Clare Vyner is one of the interesting ones of the season. The house, in Upper Grosvenor-street, where the dance took place, has a set of drawing-rooms panelled in white in the Adams style. Lady Violet has no girls, her family consisting of three sons, the eldest of whom is married to a daughter of Viscount Churchill.

Lady Violet Brassey.

Clubland Changes.

Clubland is gradually changing and seems to be coming further west. The latest club to contemplate a move is the Royal Thames Yacht. Its premises in Piccadilly are on the Burdett-Courts estate, whose recent sale compels them to quit. They propose to go to Sir Edward Naylor-Leyland's house in Knightsbridge, a fine mansion next to the one belonging to Mrs. Arthur Sassoon and overlooking Rotten Row.

Marlborough House.

Marlborough House has its associations, not only with Queen Alexandra and Queen Adelaide, but also with Nell Gwynne. E. M. Ward's picture of King Charles talking to that frail lady locates the scene of the sentimental interview at a spot in the extreme south-eastern corner of the Marlborough House grounds; and there is every reason to believe that he locates it correctly.

Not Old Enough!

Several years ago, in the course of some alterations at 79, Pall Mall, an old watch was dug up; and it was believed that it was Nell Gwynne's watch, presented to her by the King, and flung away in a fit of peevishness. Further investigation, however, proved that it was of eighteenth century workmanship.

The Window Cleaners!

They talk of Mr. Neville Chamberlain as a possible successor to Sir Arthur Griffith-Boscawen; but I doubt whether the appointment would be popular. He was not a success as Minister of National Service. It was during his tenure of that office that two solicitors who had volunteered for national service were commissioned to clean the windows of certain other solicitors who had not volunteered.

Casino at Carthage!

Count Bryon Kuhn de Prorok, the well-known archaeologist, is in Paris at present (my correspondent says), making arrangements for excavations on the site of Carthage, which, he believes, will yield treasures far surpassing those discovered in Egypt. He is being assisted by American scientists. There is also a proposal by a number of financiers to erect an African Deauville on the site with a casino that will rival Monte Carlo.

A Housing "Ramp"?

The reason why so many people are feeling very nervous about the prospect of rent decontrol is this. It is freely rumoured that a number of speculative financiers have been buying up house property in all directions for the express purpose of exploiting the situation which will arise when control is removed. That is a grave social danger.

Skill in Beauty Judgment.

An artist friend tells me that he is awaiting with considerable interest the weekly verdicts of Daily Mirror readers on the "Beauties of 1923." Judgment of beauty calls for considerable skill, he declares, but he admits that such skill may be possessed by thousands of people without any special artistic training. With women it is often a gift, and I think it is more common amongst men than is generally admitted. We shall see.

Marriage Law Inequalities!

The Bill entitling women to demand dissolution of their marriages on the same grounds as men has passed its second reading; but it must not be supposed that the inequalities in the existing marriage laws are all in favour of men. As things stand, a wealthy woman, married to a poor man, is at liberty to desert him, and cannot be called upon to contribute to his support unless he actually becomes chargeable to the rates. Men who desert their wives have to pay or go to prison.

Queen Designs Garden.

Queen Alexandra's activities include gardening, and, as last year, she has designed a water garden for The Daily Mail Ideal Home Exhibition, now open at Olympia. This fascinating, informal glade suggests how a small space of land may be treated. The banks about the irregular pool are edged with evergreens and dotted with spring blooms, Alpine and rock plants. Down a pile of Yorkshire stones water splashes into the grass-lined pool—an effect that is enhanced, after dusk, by masked lights.

Queen Alexandra, with her youngest daughter, Queen Maud of Norway, who was married in 1896. Her husband, Prince Charles of Denmark, was elected King of Norway in 1905.

The King Amused.

The King, accompanied by the Queen, the Marquis and Marchioness of Cambridge and Sir Bryan Faussett, went to see "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife" at the Queen's Theatre this week. When in reply to a question, Bluebeard (Mr. Norman McKinnel) said, "Yes, I've been married before—seven times—once more than Henry the Eighth, and he was some King," nobody laughed more heartily than his Majesty.

Next Haymarket Production.

I hear that Miss Gertrude Jennings' new three-act comedy will be produced at the Haymarket Theatre on the Saturday of Easter week, with a very strong cast, which includes Miss Lilian Braithwaite, Miss Athene Seyler and Mr. Allan Aynesworth. I believe that a title is not yet fixed upon. It was at the Haymarket, by the way, that "The Young Person in Pink" first made her bow.

Mr. Asquith at the Theatre.

Mr. Asquith is a somewhat infrequent visitor to the theatre these days, but, accompanied by his son, Anthony, he paid a visit to the second performance of "The Bad Mag" at the New Theatre. The comparative immunity afforded by the dress circle screened him from the observation of a large portion of the audience.

Fresh Air and Bovril—or, as the Ministry of Health Report said: "a sanitary environment and sound nutrition"—are the great safeguards of health.

You take less fresh air in winter because of the cold. Bovril not only keeps you warm and enables you to get the benefit of fresh air, but also by ensuring sound nutrition strengthens the body against the attacks of disease.

The Glory of the Gardens of the Queens.

THERE is all the wistful charm of Spring, all the golden glory of Summer, in the wonderful Royal Gardens at The Daily Mail Ideal Home Exhibition. Designed by Queens and Royal Ladies of Europe, they have been lavishly constructed by the foremost landscape gardeners in the country. Every yard of their winding paths is a refreshing tonic. From the rock and water garden that frames a rushing mountain torrent, to the quiet walks by placid lily pools, there is not a step which does not bring forth some new vision of loveliness.

The rich splendour of a garden of Old Spain contrasts with the romantic shadows of a camping spot where one might meet Peter Pan himself. A Spring garden decked in the beauty of simple English flowers, stands shyly by another where column and fountain are set in a blaze of bloom. So, through all the spectacle of loveliness, the eye finds new delights. Come and see the Gardens of the Queens to-day. Admission to the Annexe is 1/- extra (6d. after 6 p.m.), and all proceeds go to the Middlesex Hospital.

A Happy Family of Pets Whose Comical Adventures Are Famous Throughout the World

FARMYARD CHATTER.

Daily Mirror Office.

MY DEAR BOYS AND GIRLS,—

The pets had rather an amusing adventure with a guinea-fowl to-day. This queer bird—it is something between a pheasant, a peacock and a turkey—is sometimes found in the poultry yards of farms, where it struts about all day long uttering its discordant cries.

If you listen to a guinea-fowl you will probably come to the conclusion that it must be suffering from a very bad sore throat! Its cry sounds something like "Come back! C-o-o-o back! C-o-o-o back-ack!" When it is extra hoarse it is most like: "Kee-uk! Kee-ee-uk! Kee-ee-uk-uk!"

You will easily imagine that the guinea-fowl does more than his share of the noise and confusion in a poultry yard.

Have you ever listened for a few minutes to "farmyard chatter"? What a noise it is! "Quack! Quack! Quack!" cry the ducks. "Cluck! Cluruck! Cluruck!" gurgle the chickens.

"Gobble! Gobble! Gobble!" goes the turkey. "Come back! Come back!" squeak the guinea-fowls.

"Oomph! Oomph! Oomph!" grunt the pigs.

"Cock-a-doodle-doo!" (You know where that comes from!)

"Hee-haw! haw! haw!" "Neigh-ee-ee!" "Moo-oo-oo!"—cry our four-footed friends.

But I think the most deafening noise of all is a pig's cry of distress. Have you ever heard a fat porker protesting when the farmer tries to make him go into a sty?

Your affectionate
Uncle Dick.

THIS IS A "STINGER"!

Something for You to Puzzle Out at Your Leisure.

YOU might think there was only one kind of sting—the one you get from a bee or a wasp. But there are lots of other stings as well, and here is a little puzzle which concerns itself with nothing but stings. The first one is resting. Can you guess the others?

1. A sting that cures fatigue.—Resting.
2. A sting that cures hunger.
3. An idle and wicked sting.
4. This sting is necessary if you want to keep the house nice and clean.
5. Letters all need this sting before they can arrive anywhere.
6. A sting that causes a laugh.
7. Most beef has this sting sooner or later.
8. Only vain people indulge in this sting.
9. The last sting, that never wears out.

Probably some of these will give you sleepless nights, so I will publish the solutions as soon as possible.

If you manage to solve them all beforehand, however, don't trouble to send in your solutions. There are no prizes offered.

TREAT YOUR PETS KINDLY

HERE are the answers to letters about pets from this week's postbag. I hope my hints will prove useful.

Dick, Ross-shire.—Glad to hear from one of my namesakes! Keep your tortoise in a box filled with hay until the weather is warmer. Then you can let him out in the garden; but if you don't keep an eye on him he will probably burrow and disappear one day. Feed him on lettuce leaves and other greenstuff and milk.

Ellened Stephens, Clapham.—Your puppy will soon get used to his new home if you are kind to him. Give him bread soaked in milk, a little soft meat chopped up and mashed food. He will soon grow and demand meaty bones and dog biscuits.

Jan Morphew.—I'm afraid I don't know how you can tame a cockatoo—unless you try the old-fashioned remedy of putting salt on its tail!

Arthur Leonard.—Your pussy probably wants some lotion. I should take her to a vet.

I have also received several other letters, which I am answering here. Connie.—Squeak thanks you for your letter. She feels very flattered at all the nice things you say. Yes, when she is excited the hair on her head always stands up. She looks quite ruffled sometimes! Six Namelites.—Glad you enjoy our page. No, I certainly do NOT wear tortoiseshell-rimmed glasses. I have tried to, but they always fall off the end of my nose, generally when I'm drinking soup.

PIP TRIES TO OIL A GUINEA-FOWL'S VOICE!

1. Hearing a harsh, grating cry coming from a poultry yard, the pets went in—

2.—and found a guinea-fowl. Guinea-fowls have very queer voices.

3. "Poor bird; it must be hoarse!" said Squeak. "P'raps it needs 'oiling'!"

4. Pip found an oil-can—and tried to oil the guinea-fowl's voice!

5. But the poor bird objected. It didn't like the flavour of oil!

6. Then an angry farmer came up and chased the pets away.

"THE PICTURE OF HEALTH AND MISCHIEF"

The mother of this chubby little child wrote to us:

"Our baby boy could easily be called the 'Cristolax Baby,' for he had some of this in nearly every bottle until 12 months old, and still has it. He is just the picture of health and mischief."

Your child, too, could be equally healthy and happy. This is the secret of it:—

Keep the child free from constipation. Let the food waste be expelled easily and naturally. But don't give Castor Oil or other purging medicines. Give Cristolax only. It cannot gripe. It has no harmful after-effects. It is delicious to taste.

Cristolax combines the lubricating effect of the finest medicinal paraffin with the laxative, nutrient and digestive properties of the purest malt extract. It is equally delicious taken dry or dissolved in milk.

THE MYSTERY HUSBAND

By A. J. RUSSELL

"Do you think marriage a form of madness?" he asked. She sent a smoke-ring after the disappearing waiter. "Most people are a little unbalanced on their wedding day. That's why I shall get married some day. You and I can both be trusted to do our share of stupid things. Why do you ask?"

NEW READERS BEGIN HERE.

"THAT young man is growing too self-important," is Mrs. Manson's opinion of Ronald Sturdee, her prospective son-in-law, who left the village of Redway Bank, where Mrs. Manson is postmistress, to achieve fame and fortune as an impresario in London. Her pretty daughter Eve is greatly distressed because Ronald writes so frequently. It seems that Ronald is forgetting his village sweetheart; is perhaps repenting of his impulsive engagement to her.

Nevertheless, Ronald finally comes down to Redway Bank to discuss matters with Eve that cannot be fairly stated in a letter. Eve, who loves Ronald passionately, steals herself to hear the news that he does not want to marry her now that he is a celebrity in the musical world—the man who discovered the great singer, Navana.

Ronald, however, astounds her by saying that he wants the marriage to take place almost immediately, and Eve, stifling her uneasiness at her lover's strange behaviour, is overjoyed and consents. They begin their honeymoon in Devon, but after three days Ronald announces that he must go to Paris forthwith in order to book a new Welsh soprano who has made a great hit. He can't take Eve with him, he explains, because the journey will be a rush and he has not much spare cash.

During his absence Eve has to stay alone in their London flat, and she is frightened.

Ronald returns and laughs at her for her fears. A feeling of restraint develops between them, caused by the contrast of her husband's unconventional temperament with her own warm nature. She endeavours to understand his business methods and his ways, but she feels she is failing. Even the two children that are born to them do not draw him any nearer. In a moment of revelation Eve feels she hates her husband.

A fascinating little mix, Trixie Davies, comes into Ronald's life, and he falls head over heels in love with her. He is even tempted to abandon his wife and children for her sake.

THE GREAT LOVER.

RONALD STURDEE puzzled his usually clear brain to find the solution of the Trixie problem. Was she in love with another? No, for she had declared otherwise. Was she only pretending an interest in him? No, for there could be no object in such pretence. Was she interested in him because she had none elsewhere? No, for she could draw to her whom she chose.

Then why did she seek his company? There could be, he reasoned, no pleasure for her in associating with one for whom she had no great affection.

Trixie's deep interest, which stopped short of true affection, had the natural effect upon a man of Ronald's forceful character, of stimulating his ardour, of making him more determined than ever to induce a declaration.

Consequently he spoke of his love for her on numerous occasions, in season, out of season. He was consistently being repulsed; he was never subdued.

"Why do you tantalise me in this way?" he remonstrated. "Tell me straight out that you love me as I love you; or else say that you can never love me and let us break off our friendship."

At the time it did not seem strange to him that Trixie raised no objection to his frequent importuning. Instead of trying him to change the topic for one more fruitful of result she encouraged him to express his fervent love, though she was never betrayed into giving any reason for her obstinate refusal to reveal her mind.

He quoted: "I will come—perhaps. You always say that and leave me high and dry with no consolation."

They were seated in a snug Soho restaurant.

(All the characters in this story are fictitious. Translation, dramatic and all other rights reserved.)

"When will this come day arrive?" he repeated.

From behind the smiling mask there came a variation of Trixie's habitually non-committal rejoinder. She now said: "You will know in good time when it is well for you to know."

"But when?" "How impatiently importunate you are! I shall tell you, Mr. Asquith to you if you ask me again to-night."

It was ever the same. Eve and the children returned from Redway Bank and the ordinary routine of life at the flat was resumed. Summer passed and winter came.

The friendship between Ronald and Trixie continued unbroken, and Ronald found himself more desperately in love with the enchanting scribe than ever.

One evening, on the slightest excuse, his mind reverted to the evergreen subject: "What were Trixie's real thoughts concerning himself? Was he in love with him as he was in love with her? If so, why was she so fearful to declare it?"

One evening at dinner Trixie made a remark which surprised him.

"I think you ought to be in the theatrical profession," she said.

"I meant to say," she laughed, "that you'd have filled the part of a lover to perfection. You are indeed a great lover."

The old cynical smile showed again around the corners of his mouth. "Will you never cease bantering?" he tartly demanded.

"Wrong again! That time I was speaking exactly what was in my mind. Clive, old boy, I really believe you could be the great lover. You are so insistent, so determined, in your love-making that few women could resist you."

"And yet you persist in doing so!"

She accepted a cigarette.

"Oh, I'm not a woman. I'm—just a journalist."

Ronald thought on:

"What was the secret of this amazing woman?" Illumination came. Perhaps she had not yet been shot by Cupid's dart, even as he had not when he was her age. Perhaps that was the explanation. Was she drawn to him as he had been drawn to Eve by reason of the mystical fascination of love? He recalled the day when he had gone down to Redway Bank fully determined to break off his engagement to Eve. But the sight of her tremulous anxiety, the love o'er-brimming in her eyes, had been too much for his capacity for cruelty. He had married her rather than break her heart.

Again he strove to solve the mystery of his present enchantment.

"What are your notions on marriage?" he asked in a lowered voice, so that he should not be again overheard by the couple at the next table, who had been looking interestedly in his direction. "Are you a nun at heart?"

She made a wry face. "Convent walls, even when bright with nectaries and peacocks, make no appeal to me. I could never take the veil."

"Nor the wedding veil?"

She pinched his chin. "You overgrown grasshopper! You take some wide leaps. You jump from the singular to the plural. You sacred to the—what shall I call it—the profane."

"Do you think marriage a form of madness?" he demanded, taking another leap.

She sent a smoke-ring after the disappearing waiter.

"Most persons are a little unbalanced on their wedding day. That's why I shall get married some day. You and I can both be trusted to do our share of stupid things. Why do you ask?"

For a while he sat regarding her curiously. She was leaning slightly forward, her elbows on the tablecloth, her coffee between her hands, her red-gold hair touching her right eyebrow, her eyes dancing wickedly.

THE UNPROFITABLE SURRENDER.

"TRIXIE, tell me plainly—do you love me?" She extended a bare white arm towards him, and for the moment her eyes seemed to lose their mockery.

"Why are you so eternally selfish?" she asked almost plaintively.

He caught her hand and kissed it, but she thrust it sharply away. He noticed that she threw a hurried, almost apprehensive glance around the restaurant as she did so.

"Selfish? How am I selfish?" he stammered. "And why did you look so nervous just then?"

She answered the first part of his query—answered it seriously. For once he saw Trixie in earnest.

"Of course you are selfish—the most selfish man I have met. You have dared make love to me, but have never once thought of making the sacrifice which love entails."

"You mean—" "Didn't you say you'd never leave your wife and children?" "But, Trixie, of course I said that. I couldn't deliberately hurt others to make myself happy."

Her elbows were back on the tablecloth, her chin in her hands, her smooth, thoughtful forehead within a foot of his.

"You mean you couldn't hurt your wife and children?" "Of course!"

"But if I said 'Yes' to your repeated question—what then? Have you ever thought of me?"

Trixie's blue eyes rested dreamily on a photograph of Marshal Roch above Sturdee's head.

So that was the solution! Trixie was unwilling to confess her love to him because he had vowed never to leave Eve and his children. Because she thought him a coward.

"You think I'm afraid?" he asked suddenly.

"Yes," she said.

The waiter descended upon them with the bill. Ronald Sturdee passed him a note and sent him away for change.

"I don't understand that a man can be so unselfish that he'll deny himself every delight rather than hurt his own?"

Trixie countered: "And can't you understand that a man who is really in love will deny everything else everything rather than deny anything to the one he loves?" She spoke tenderly.

Trixie was right! Again he had only been playing the lover, playing it as he had played it with Eve. For what he was! He should have known by now that the real woman would not be satisfied with half a man's love.

His eyes returned to Trixie. She was still gazing dreamily over his head. He thought of Eve, of his children. Could he cut them out of his life?

There came back the memory of that afternoon on Spinn-down when he had suddenly changed his mind, when, instead of asking for leave to break the engagement, he had hurried Eve into an earlier wedding. Had he been firm then instead of soft-hearted, his life would have been different, perhaps happier.

Eve's life would have been different; and certainly happier. He would have continued to be a bachelor until Fate sent Trixie to him and Eve would have married one who could have responded more fervently to her desire to be loved.

Was it too late now? Would not Eve be better off if, at this late hour, he broke the shackles which bound them? He could make her a handsome allowance as alimony and he could provide for the children until they grew up.

Again he looked across at Trixie and, as he did so, a great wave of desire swept him from his feet. Yes, for Trixie he would renounce everything—even his marriage vow.

Trixie's eyes met his. "What have you been evolving in that big head of yours? Tell me."

"Well, Clive," she said. "What have you been evolving in that big head of yours? Tell me."

Huskily he replied.

"I've been thinking that you were right—that I have no right to ask if you love me unless I am prepared to cut everything else adrift for you."

Ronald looked away for an instant, and then he faced across the table, his grey eyes seeking hers, his strong face pale, his lips trembling.

"Trixie, do you love me?" "Trixie, do you love me?" "Does that mean you will give up Eve for me?"

A pause.

"Yes."

"Ah!"

Trixie raised her eyes and dropped them again in the same instant. But as she did so he noticed they glittered faintly, as though in triumph.

The act of saying "Yes" had made him feel a worm; that glitter in Trixie's fleeting glance added a sense of danger. She shook herself.

What an idiot he was becoming! For was not this the moment of his triumph?

"And now, Trixie, I have burnt my boats. Do you love me?"

For a second she seemed to hesitate. He could see; or thought he could see, the word "Yes," the word which meant that he had triumphed, that this most bewitching of all women was ready to become his for ever, actually forming on her lips. But even now, now that he had ruthlessly decided to cut adrift from Eve, Trixie checked herself.

Then, with a little shake of her head, as though she had again changed her mind, she gave her old aggravating rejoinder.

"You shall know—some day."

He was taken aback.

"But—but when? Are you never going to tell me?" he coaxed.

She gave one of her baffling smiles.

"You shall know—soon."

So he had advanced no further, despite his betrayal of Eve. Trixie had drawn back when actually committing herself. Why? Would she ever say "Yes" or was she still fooling him?

He tried again and again to discover what was in her mind, but she invariably put him off. "You shall know—very soon," marked the limit of his advance.

Another fine instalment to-morrow.

Bi-store's are dangerous

Cause of Indigestion, Gastritis, Sleeplessness, Anæmia, Headache and Run-down, Tired Feeling.

Nearly all the ills of life—big and little—are due to a deranged condition of the stomach, brought on in about 99 cases out of a 100 by acidity. If acid be present in the stomach, it ferments the food you eat, sets up intense irritation and, by preventing normal digestion of the food eaten, retards nourishment of the system, lowers the quality of the blood, reduces vitality and brings on a host of troubles.

SKIN DISORDERS DUE TO ACID.

Why is it so many young people nowadays have complexion and skin blemishes when they should have skins of satin-smoothness? It is due to acidity. Wherever there are blemishes, you hear of terrible skin diseases resulting from lack of nourishment and consequent blood-poverty. . . . And you are in the same case when acidity is present in your stomach, upsetting the digestion. You, too, lack nourishment and have poor blood—you actually starve amid plenty!

WHAT DO DOCTORS SAY—?

Medicine men will tell you that acidity is a widespread evil and that the statements made above are wholly true. And they will tell you there is no better remedy in all the world than Bisurated Magnesia, a bland, pure, harmless compound that neutralises every trace of Magnesia, the moment it enters the stomach. Bisurated Magnesia is a natural cure for such stomach troubles as indigestion, gastritis, dyspepsia, heartburn, palpitation and flatulence; it stops the possibility of your food fermenting and it rapidly restores normal, healthy digestion. Your blood becomes richer with every dose of Bisurated Magnesia; your eyes become clearer; your cheeks pinker and your skin smoother. You find yourself able to do more and more without tiring; you follow and find yourself actually feeling younger! These results last, mind you; they do not pass away and leave you as you were before.

WHAT ONE USER SAYS:

The following letter is but one of thousands on the makers' files, which are open to inspection by anyone interested.

St. Michael's House, Southampton.

Messrs. Bismag Ltd., London, N.W.1.

Dear Sirs,—For many years I was a martyr to indigestion and could get no relief. I had come to regard my case as incurable until some six months ago, when a friend induced me to try Bisurated Magnesia, which I am pleased to say effected a complete and permanent cure. I can now eat anything without feeling the slightest discomfort, and I feel entirely restored. Bisurated Magnesia, I find, wears an altogether brighter aspect.

Yours very truly, (Signed) Ernest Lawton.

TENNIS FROCKS OF THE FUTURE—SURPRISES!

EVER such a little bit of Spanish lace—a quarter of a yard or so—and you'll get the real Paris touch on your plain straw toque, since that's what the very smartest women are wearing now, attached by a buckle, and falling over the right ear!

A waterfall effect is given by the cascade of diamonds and sapphires on this dinner frock.

SLEEVES!

I wonder if there ever were such sleeves, or trapezoids of sleeves, as the Parisienne wears just now. One of the latest is composed of three wide bands of brocade or embroidery, only joined by a few stitches—half an inch of them—on the under part of the arm. With evening frocks the "sleeves" often begin only where they used to end—at the elbow.

TENNIS DRESSES.

So amusing I find the new tennis frocks we shall be wearing later on—a few of them have got to the Riviera, where, at Cannes next Saturday, there is to be the biggest show of mannequins at the Casino that ever was! They are one-piece frocks of loosely-woven crepe, perfectly plain in front, and brilliantly adorned with embroidered birds, beasts or flowers at the back!

WHEELS AND WHEELS.

Wheels now encircle the head of the theatre-goer who discards a hat, and the dancer who knows what's what. Sometimes they are made with tiny scarlet centres and spokes of silver tissue, set closely together, sometimes the centres are of shot tissue and loops of narrow silver ribbon.

A NEW USE FOR SHAWLS.

If you are tired of the Spanish touch and don't want to turn your shawl into a bed-cover as so many women are doing, use it to line a black moroccan cloak! The brighter the embroidered corners the better!

SO SIMPLE.

Beware the deceptive simplicity of the plain tailor-cut overcoat fastening with a single button. It will open to display a gorgeous lining to match a gorgeous frock since, if you can surprise people somehow by this all too deceptive simplicity, you feel a thrill of delight—at least, if you are a true Parisienne.

SHALL we go green? That is what the Parisienne is asking just now. And she's inclined to be emphatically in favour of the notion. Suede coats of the brightest emerald or jade are being worn with felt hats dyed to match. Women have discovered that this green in daylight brightens the eyes! Almond green is the newest colour, but it's a better night shade than a day one!

A SURPRISE!

I never expected to see the Parisienne in goloshes—but the low-cut shoe has brought something very like it in the shape of a rubber front, very well cut, which slips over half the foot, while a narrow stitched band goes round behind the heel. They can be put on when the pavements are wet and hardly show—looking like a patent leather ornamentation.

I DON'T know why the smart woman wears a water proof, or rather when! But those shiny black ones that English women loved during the war, with white belt and collar and cuffs are being shown in some of the shops! Of course, when a French woman dresses at all—you know how drowsily a dawdling Parisienne can be!—she does it thoroughly! So the raincoat has a hat and gloves to match and boots.

ORCHIDS AGAIN.

Simplicity may be the note in the walking frock, but when the Parisienne pins two orchids into her simple frock, puts an eye veil on her little untrimmed hat and tucks a walking-stick under her arm, the effect is not simple at all. There is hardly an English word that expresses it!

EVENING HATS.

Once again the hat with an evening gown is being "tried out." These are not the drooping, beplumed hats of the past, though, but smart little pull-on hats quite often of the new gauze brocade or of tissue.

THE NEW REVER.

For the woman who is not as thin as she used to be the new rever is perfection. On a dark frock a round collar of heavily embroidered silk continues as a rever to the low waist line and then becomes a bow and ends!

A smart dinner gown of coffee-coloured lace, with wide taffeta sash in flame, terminating in large flare on right hip.

New Paris creation in foresters' green georgette. The material is formed into unique bow at the left, which adds character to the hat.

HOW INDIGESTION'S AGONIES ARE DISPELLED BY

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills

They give New Vitality—and more.

A choice between starvation or merciless torture is the dismal prospect before all victims of indigestion, for although they actually need food to nourish the body, they are afraid to eat because of the agony that follows. The urgent need is to gain strength so that the stomach can extract good from the food taken. Pain after eating is the way the stomach signifies its protest that it is too weak to work.

New strength is given to weak stomachs by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, because these pills enrich and purify the blood supply. This is the natural process of giving strength and tone to the stomach, and it accounts for the many cures of indigestion that are due to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. From the first the appetite revives; then food can be taken without pain, and the indigestion is steadily dispelled.

So begin Dr. Williams' Pink Pills now. Of chemists, or from address below, 34. Od. per box, post free. Good for men and women too.

FREE—All sufferers from indigestion should read the booklet, "What to Eat," sent free to all who write to Mail Dept., 34, Fitzroy Square, London, W. 1.

AN OBLIGING HAIRDRESSER.

A Well-Known Hairdresser Tells How to Make a Remedy for Grey Hair.

Mr. Frank Harbaugh, who has been a hairdresser for more than forty years, recently made the following statement:—

"Anyone can prepare a simple mixture at home, at very little cost, that will darken grey hair, and make it soft and glossy. To a half-pint of water add 1 ounce of bay rum, a small box of Orlex Compound and 2 ounce of glycerine. These ingredients can be bought at any chemist's at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. This will make a grey-haired person look twenty years younger. It is easy to use, does not colour the most delicate scalp, it is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off."—(Advt.)

OUR RADIO WINNERS.

Prizes Gained for Best Broadcasting Programmes.

IDEAL ENTERTAINMENT.

Widespread interest has been taken in The Daily Mirror Broadcasting Programme Competition, and so many excellent suggestions have been received that it is fortunate that the voting method of judging the entries was adopted; otherwise, only a purely arbitrary decision could have been arrived at.

As it is, however, the standard programme has been settled by the votes of the competitors themselves, and so the final order of the items selected clearly indicates what constitutes an ideal popular programme.

As a standard of length, it was decided to adopt a programme of fifteen items, and as a result of the voting this programme is composed of the following:—

(1) Song; (2) news, first item; (3) orchestral selection, first item; (4) dance music; (5) children's stories; (6) lecture; (7) news, second item; (8) orchestral selection, second item; (9) entertainer; (10) piano solo; (11) soprano solo; (12) violin solo; (13) tenor solo; (14) baritone solo; (15) orchestral selection, operatic.

Much ingenuity has been displayed by competitors in drawing up programmes. Many capital itemised programmes were submitted.

No competitor succeeded in drawing up a programme which entirely agreed with the standard ideal selection of fifteen items, but the winners have been very close to a correct solution and they are very nearly equal in merit.

The first prize of £25 has been awarded to: A. Potter, St. Quentin, 42, Lingwood-road, Clapton Common, E. 5, whose suggested programme contained fourteen correct items, out of a total of fifteen submitted.

The second prize of £10 has been awarded to: Mr. William F. Condy, 9, Deronda-road, Tulse Hill, S.E. 24, who submitted a programme of thirteen items, all of which are correct, according to the standard selection.

The third prize of £5 has been awarded to: Mr. C. W. B. Horne, Red Lodge, Chipping Sodbury, Bristol, whose suggested programme consisted of seventeen items, of which thirteen were correct.

The competition clearly proves how very popular "broadcasting" has become, and the immense variety of the suggestions—including all sorts of strange instruments and "turns"—shows that tastes of very different kinds will have to be catered for by the organisers of wireless entertainments.

DIRE FRENCH FLOODS

Many Villages in Peril of Being Ruined.

TRAINS SNOWED UP.

Floods are causing havoc in several parts of France.

The situation in the Loire Valley is very serious. The rising water has already topped the level of 1910, when severe damage was caused by floods.

Several important dams are in danger of giving way, in which event, says an Exchange telegram, a catastrophe could scarcely be averted. The cavalry school at Saumur has had to be hurriedly evacuated.

From Perpignan, in the Eastern Pyrenees, it is reported that winds have upset heavy vehicles, the electric railway to Villefranche has been dismantled, fresh forest fires are reported in the neighbouring hills, and the blaze has assumed great proportions under the influence of the windstorm.

On another side of the town heavy snow has fallen, and two trains have been snowed under. Several villages on the banks of the Loire are already inundated. In case of necessity troops of the engineers will blow up the dam at Montjeu in order to divert the floods.

The dam at Savennieres is being anxiously watched. If the rising water bursts this structure over twenty-two square miles of magnificent soil, the crops which would normally be raised thereon, would be lost. Twenty-five villages would be ruined.

THE KING HOLDS LEVEE.

Crowds Gather Near St. James' Palace to See Picturesque Ceremony.

The first levee held this year by the King took place at St. James' Palace yesterday morning. It was attended by the officers of the Army, Navy and Air Force, members of the Corps Diplomatique, representatives of the Houses of Parliament, the Bishops and the Judges.

Just before 11.30 the King, accompanied by the Marquis of Bath, drove in semi-state from Buckingham Palace to St. James' Palace. An escort of Household Cavalry was in attendance.

The King, on entering the garden of the Palace, was received by a guard of honour of the Foot Guards. The band of the Coldstream Guards and the pipers of the Scots Guards played selections during the levee.

A large crowd assembled in The Mall and in the vicinity of St. James' Palace to see the picturesque ceremony.

Remove unwanted hair the only safe way

PRUH

PRUH is totally unlike the ordinary cream-shedding lotions which irritate the skin. Pruh is a delicate violet perfume, and removes unwanted hair from face or under-arm—in not less than five minutes—without any pain. Pruh can be used whilst preparing the toilet—it leaves the skin perfectly soft, white, smooth, and hairless. It is put in the only hair-remover which is guaranteed not to irritate or inflame the skin.

WARNING. Avoid wasting money on costly preparations which irritate the skin after a short while dry up into scales or crusts, and leave the skin raw. Pruh retains its properties always and is the only really satisfactory hair-remover obtainable. For each bottle, 2/6. (If all per-fumers, chemists, and stores, or sent direct on receipt price (incl. 2d. postage) 1/-).

Long, dark Eyelashes. Use "Eyelash" Cream to darken your eyelashes and lashes. It makes them thick, long, and silky. Directions inside. Harrogate. Invaluable pots. 1/6. A FISHER & CO. (Over 40 yrs.) Strand, London.

A New Edition of 100,000 is now ready for Free Distribution to the Public.

This up-to-date book of Herbal Reference is issued by Heath & Heather, the World-famed Herb Specialists of St. Albans. It is a compendium of useful information on Nature's Remedies for all the common every-day ills of mankind and should be a treasured possession in every household.

It has been a revelation to many of those who have already received it, and congratulatory letters are daily received by its publishers, with expressions of profound gratitude for the information it contains.

It is certainly foolish to continue dosing with minerals and chemicals which usually do more harm than good, when nature has provided an abundance of healthful herbs for remedial use. The correct remedy is plainly indicated in the book, which at the same time is intensely interesting from a literary point of view.

Heath & Heather have the finest range of Herbal Pills, in which they specialize. They do not offer one pill which will cure everything. Such a pill is impossible. They follow the common-sense plan of a pill for each complaint, separately compounded of nature's herbs on scientific principles. Thousands of relieved sufferers in all parts of the world are blessing the Health Book, and are enthusiastically urging their suffering friends to write for it.

RUSSELL SUIT: LORD AMPHILL NEARLY RUINED

Money Raised on Estates to Assist His Son.

WIFE'S MEN FRIENDS.

Story of "Many Indiscretions" and Kissing Incident.

Before the hearing of the divorce petition by the Hon. John Hugo Russell was again adjourned yesterday evening on his behalf was completed.

Among those who went into the witness-box were his parents, Lord and Lady Amphill.

Lord Amphill stated that, to meet expenses of this and the last trial, he and his son had had to raise money on the family estates.

"It means practically ruin to me," added Lord Amphill.

Replying to Mr. Bayford, K.C. (one of the counsel for Mrs. Russell), Lady Amphill, formerly housemaid at 42, Half Moon-street, W., where Mr. Mayer (the co-respondent) had a flat from about September, 1920, until she left in May, 1921, said he had women visitors there.

She saw Mrs. Russell there five or six times. On one occasion she went into the hall of the flat, and Mr. Mayer came out and said she could not come in. He came from the bedroom.

Did you notice anything at the same time?—Yes. Someone was having a bath. Water was running into the bath and somebody splashing.

Later Mr. Mayer and Mrs. Russell came out together in evening dress. When she went into the bedroom she found hairpins and powder and a small bag of soap and she had never seen before on the floor. It was large enough to hold a woman's dress.

In the bathroom two towels were on the floor. The bath was wet and warm, and a cigarette case was on the table in the sitting-room was a woman's fur and a little hat.

Were there any photographs about?—Yes, in the sitting-room. There were two of Mrs. Russell. One in evening dress and one in furs.

DETECTIVE'S INQUIRIES.

Cross-examined by Mr. Hastings, K.C. (for the wife), Miss Gower said that when Mr. Stockley (a private detective) went to see her he took a photograph with him.

And asked you if it was Mrs. Russell?—No. He asked me if I knew her.

Had you noticed any other of the ladies who came to the flat?—Yes, one after another.

How many ladies had a bath in the flat?—Only the one, as far as I know.

Cross-examined by Sir Ellis Hume-Williams, K.C. (for Mr. Mayer), Miss Gower said Mr. Mayer used to smoke a great many cigarettes.

And also used powder after shaving?—I do not remember that. He used to shave in the bathroom.

Have you any doubt that the lady who visited Mr. Mayer was Mrs. Russell?—None whatever.

Herbert Foster, a valet at Half Moon-street from September, 1920, until June, 1921, said he had seen Mrs. Russell there nine or ten times, usually about tea-time.

When she came was there nobody else there except Mr. Mayer?—She first called at the flat just after Christmas, 1920. Sometimes on other occasions Mr. Mayer would send down a message saying he was not to be disturbed as he had a lady with him.

PICTURE RECOGNISED.

Housekeeper's Story of Mr. Mayer's Instructions: "I Am Out."

Mrs. Ellen Maud Rayner, who was housekeeper at 42, Half Moon-street from April, 1921, said she recognised a photograph of a lady and a dog as that of Mrs. Russell, who used to call at Mr. Mayer's flat. There were two other ladies beside Mrs. Russell, who called.

She came about nine or ten times, mostly about tea-time, and once lunched with Mr. Mayer. It was in the summer-time, because strawberries and cream were served.

Did Mr. Mayer ever give you any instructions?—Yes. If he was engaged I was to say either that he was engaged and could not see anybody or out.

Mr. Hastings: Has your husband been associating with Stockley's man?—He has been about with Stockley's assistants, because he has been followed.

Has he ever hidden in public-houses?—He has sometimes bobbed in the front and out at the back.

Were you and your husband summarily dismissed from your situation?—No.

Why were you discharged?—Mostly for being too strict disciplinarians towards the staff. You were turned out there any other time?—No. We were allowed a month in which to find rooms.

Sir Ellis Hume-Williams: Were you dismissed for drunkenness?—Mrs. Rayner: Not to my knowledge. I had two or three big shocks while I was at Half Moon-street. One was when a maid robbed one of the tenants of nearly a thousand pounds' worth of jewellery, and again when I found the late Marquis of Milford Haven dead in bed. It was a very great shock to me, and I have never been the same woman since.

Do you know a man named Franklin?—Yes. While he was at Half Moon-street he was on more than one occasion brought home drunk in a taxi?—Never in my life.

On one occasion did you go downstairs to your room and find your husband drinking whisky with two or three maids, and did you make a tremendous scene and break the bottles and glasses?—Never. I have never been drunk in my life.

Kathleen Foster, formerly under-housemaid at 42, Half Moon-street, also spoke to Mrs. Russell visiting there.

WEDDING-RING OFF.

Mr. Russell's Mother's Conversation with Wife on Marriage Vows.

Lady Amphill, mother of Mr. Russell, then gave evidence. She said she was Lady-in-Waiting to the Queen and presented her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Russell, at Court in 1913, at the very first opportunity.

Did you see your son on the morning of the wedding?—Yes.

Were you in favour of the marriage?—I was against it, because I thought my son was too young, but afterwards my husband and I were only too anxious to keep up friendly relations with my daughter-in-law.

Did you, in December, 1921, add Lady Amphill, she noticed that Mrs. Russell was not wearing her wedding-ring.

In December, 1921, on receiving a letter from her son, she went and saw him in London, finding him unhappy and very anxious. The following February witness had a conversation with Mrs. Russell.

"RATHER HORRIFIED."

"I asked her," said Lady Amphill, "why, after she had taken an oath before God and witnesses, she was not keeping it and had not kept it, and she replied that she had made the oath with mental reservations."

"I think I was rather horrified, but went on with the conversation. I cannot remember exactly what she said, but I know she understood I meant she was not living with my son properly as his wife."

"She never for a moment denied it, and although it is very difficult, after this lapse of time, to say exactly the words, I left with the firm conviction that she never had lived properly with my son, and she conveyed to me that she did not intend to do so."

Mrs. Russell.

Did you know at this time that your daughter-in-law was expecting a child?—I had no idea. From whom did you hear of it?—From my son.

You heard of the suggested sleep-walking. Have you ever known him to be a sleep-walker?—No.

"BABY NOT LIKE HIM."

Lady Amphill produced a packet of photographs of her son as a baby. She said she had seen Mrs. Russell's child during the hearing of the last case, but could see no similarity between it and Mr. Russell.

Miss Maud Acton, of 58, Redcliff-square, gave evidence that she had known Mrs. Russell ever since she was seventeen, and was very fond of her. She was still fond of "what she was."

After her return from Switzerland Mrs. Russell went out to dances practically every night. She spoke to her about it, pointing out how dangerous it was for one who was so attractive to go out with men at night. Mrs. Russell, however, assured her that she could "best any man."

FORTUNE-TELLER VISIT.

Friend's Inquiry: "Is Mr. Mayer in Love Like They All Are?"

Continuing, Miss Acton said she knew the Russells at their flat in Harrington-gardens. During that time she thought Mrs. Russell had treated her husband very badly indeed. She was worried and did not consider to him, and he was always left alone.

When they went to Curzon-street Mrs. Russell was always out dancing. Her attitude towards her husband was even worse than formerly.

Miss Acton said she recollected a conversation with Mrs. Russell which took place between January 8 and 31, 1921. Mrs. Russell told her she had never lived with her husband as his wife, and if she did have a child it certainly would not be his. She also said that she never would live with him as his wife.

On July 7 she mentioned the matter again. She said: "Are the twins really coming, Chris?" Mrs. Russell replied: "Not for a long time yet. Not till September."

Asked if she recollected saying in January that if she did have a child it would not be her husband's, Mrs. Russell turned sharply to her and said: "You don't remember the date?"

Mrs. Russell went on to say there were such things as Hunsian scenes. She replied: "You don't expect me to believe that?" and Mrs. Russell nodded.

Proceeding, Miss Acton stated that at Harrington-gardens Mrs. Russell told her she had been to a fortune-teller, who said she was going to have a baby.

"She reminded me," said Miss Acton, "of my warning to her. She said: 'Don't you remember how you remarked I should be overpowered if I went into a taxicab with men? You were right and I was wrong.'"

After the birth of the baby she received a letter from Mrs. Russell in which she said: "You were right in forming such an opinion." The opinion was that Mr. Russell was not the father of the child. Mrs. Russell had never once said he was.

Miss Acton said she heard Mayer's name repeatedly in the summer of 1920. She remarked to Mrs. Russell: "I suppose he is in love with you, as they all are." Mrs. Russell replied: "I suppose so."

MR. "X" IN CAR.

Dance Drive Episode of "Just One Kiss To Go on With."

Miss Acton, cross-examined by Mr. Patrick Hastings, said but for the "unexplained birth of this child," she had nothing against Mrs. Russell. They were very fond of one another.

Was she very outspoken to you with regard to her indiscretions?—Yes. She was indiscreet with many men.

Knowing everything, could you have believed she was immoral in the slightest degree?—I did not think so before the hearing of the last case.

Did you ever have any talk with Mr. Russell as to making his wife happy?—I knew he would have done anything on earth to make her happy.

Answering Sir Ellis Hume-Williams, Miss Acton said Mrs. Russell was the last woman in the world to permit rudeness and familiarity, perhaps, but she would not have resented being kissed.

Sir Edward Marshall-Hall: Do you know whether, in fact, Mrs. Russell was ever kissed by another man?—Miss Acton: Yes, I do.

"Mrs. Russell," said Miss Acton, "went to a dance. She and Mr. X went out in a car. She thought it was time to go back to the dance and he got out. She said, 'Can't you give me one kiss to go on with?' and he kissed her."

Mr. Hastings: You know this man, "Mr. X"?—Miss Acton: Yes.

Don't you know Mrs. Russell has known him since she was sixteen?—I do not know.

And that this terrible incident took place long before she was married?—No. It was after.

"NOTHING TO BE ASHAMED OF."

Mrs. Moresby White stated that when Mrs. Russell informed her she was going to have a baby she remarked "John will be delighted," and Mrs. Russell said, "Yes. I told him today."

Later Mrs. Russell stated, "I have done nothing to be ashamed of. I don't mind having an illegitimate child. I would rather it was John's. As a matter of fact, it is his."

Then she said her husband had "behaved like a Hun," and referred to him walking in his sleep, saying, "Is it not funny that is how it happened?"

"I said," added Mrs. White, "that I did not believe her and she was very angry."

Mr. Hastings: Did you ever say that Mrs. Russell was the wickedest woman in London?—Mrs. White: No.

Mrs. E. Shorten, formerly a friend of Mrs. Russell, said she told her Mr. Mayer called her "Peggy."

Mrs. Russell would say, "For heaven's sake take John out and keep his eye off the ball." Sir Edward Marshall-Hall: If you take your eye off the ball in golf you miss your stroke, don't you? Who was the ball?—Mrs. Shorten: I imagine Mr. Russell.
